

Facilitation of Workshops

Workshops are a suitable and lively form for constructive teamwork. Their success largely depends on methods and guidance. As external facilitators, we select the right method for the group and keep an eye on the balance between focusing on results and the involvement of the participants.

A good workshop begins with thoughtful preparation.

Typical Cases

- You feel that you are getting nowhere with the usual meetings and work sessions.
- You have a special topic that requires an exceptional method.
- You feel that during the workshop you are unable to focus on the content and the psycho-social processes while staying on schedule.

Benefits

The workshops we conduct together with you make a new and constructive experience of teamwork possible. The individual participants' high degree of involvement is both a precondition and a result. Good preparation and conscious time management are decisive for this. As a result of the workshop, you obtain easy to follow documentation and clear agreements on content and how to proceed further.

Elements of a Successful Workshop

We support you by ...

- doing the planning and preparation together with you.
- seeing to it in the workshop that the content is actually dealt with and that the schedule is kept to.
- involving everyone during the process and thus guaranteeing a joint result.
- preserving the result by adequate, easy to follow documentation.
- helping you in agreeing upon follow up activities.
